Considerable difficulty is being felt of late in the Secretariat in finding suitable hands for the more responsible clerical and higher posts. An examination of the circumstances which might have led up to this state of affairs, indicates that service in the Secretariat has ceased to be sufficiently attractive. ~~and~~ There is also a feeling on the part of smart and intelligent officials that they should take the earliest opportunity of going out of the Secretariat as Amildars etc. if they are to improve their prospects. The Secretariat has thus become a stepping-stone for the Amildari services and loses the benefit of the services of the more intelligent and energetic recruits just when they have gained some experience here and can be useful and fit for responsible charges.

On the other hand, officials who have continued in the Secretariat without taking the chance of Amildari, in their turn, seem to be under a sense of disappointment, seeing that their juniors rise to higher ranks elsewhere more rapidly than they can in the Secretariat.

2. A few parallel cases are noted in the statement appended so as to give a concrete idea of the position in this respect. It will be seen therefrom that persons who went out of the Secretariat have had chances of promotion to the grade of Assistant Commissioners, while their erstwhile colleagues and seniors in the Secretariat who are very competent and who are not less qualified, are still Superintendents of the First or Second Grade.

3. It is absolutely necessary to maintain a high standard of efficiency in the Secretariat The chances for timely promotion in the Secretariat of energetic and deserving men to higher ranks have to be increased. The number of Gazetted posts, viz., two, now open to the Secretariat subordinate staff is inadequate. It may be stated that in the Comptroller's office, one post of Deputy Comptroller and four posts of Gazetted Assistants are open to the subordinate Accounts staff. The Secretariat has a larger proportion of graduates. The gazetted posts open to the subordinate service may be increased from two to at least three.

Submitted to His Highness.

When the staff of the General and Revenue Secretariat was re-orgnised in 1917, two of the Gazetted posts in that office (those of the Registrar and one Assistant Secretary) were thrown open to the Subordinate establishment. As explained in the Chief Secretary's note dated 4th February 1936 in this file, experience has shown that the number of Gazetted posts thus allowed to the subordinate service is inadequate and that the chances of promotion in the Secretariat compare unfavourably with those in some other Departments. In view of the need for maintaining a high standard of efficiency in the Secretariat by providing adequate opportunities for timely promotion of energetic and deserving men to higher ranks, the Chief Secretary has suggested that the number of Gazetted posts open to them may be raised from two to at least three. The question was also discussed at a meeting of the Secretaries to Government in the General and Revenue Secretariat when it was resolved that the proposal of the Chief Secretary to throw open one more post of Assistant Secretary to the subordinate staff may be sanctioned for three years, for the present, reducing the Civil Service strength correspondingly.

The Members of Council and I agree with the above recommendation which may be graciously approved.
